The northward drive of the Austro-German armies from Galicia into Poland is daily becoming more formidable and England is puzzled as to whether they propose to make their main effort in this direction instead of maintaining a concentrated offense to the eastward to force the Russians out of the southeast tip of Galicia.

Whatever the ultimate object is, the fighting along the Gnila Lipa river has not abated, and this afternoon's Berlin official communication, not only records progress in this sector, but further north in the area around Lemberg as well as along what has now become the northern front between the Vistula and Bug rivers.

The Austro-German forces on this front are estimated at 2,000,000 and their progress has been rapid. They have crossed the forest fringing the Tanew river, and are not far from the Zamosz fortress, twenty-five miles north of the Galician frontier.

DUAL CITIZENSHIP RULING

STATE DEPARTMENT EXTENDS PROTECTION IF POSSIBLE.

American Son of Naturalized Parents Not Liable for Service Under Foreign Flag.

Washington, D. C.—Children born on American soil, whose parents have become naturalized American citizens, cannot be classed as possessing dual nationality and are not considered liable to military service under a foreign flag, the state department made clear in a statement issued yesterday.

"While the United States always has recognized," the state department says, "the existence of dual nationality in the case of children born in the United States of alien parents or children born in a foreign country of American parents, it does not concede that dual nationality exists in case of a foreign-born parent who has acquired naturalization as a United States citizen."

While the state department extends whatever protection it can to persons of dual nationality who enter the other country by which they are claimed, it does not assure them immunity from military service.

The statement says: "In no case in the absence of conventional arrangements can the state department assure such persons in advance that they will not be held liable under the laws of other countries concerned for the performance of military or other public service attaching to citizenship."

B'ARS GOT HIS FISH

Tale of Woe, as Old Bill Sanders Related It.

Mistake Was That He Went on Expedition Without a Gun—Uncle Joe Bunker Quite Frankly an Unbeliever.

"I stopped at Shinnepole on my way for a few days with the trout on the Beaverkill, in Sullivan county," said John Gilbert, the traveling groceryman, and Bill Sanders, the Homer of all that country, buttonholed me and said:

"Goin' to tackle the trout over in Sullivan, eh? Well, whar's your gun. Don't 'spect to git away from thar with your trout if you don't take no gun, do you? I left nine pound o' the poottiest trout that ever dodged a fly an' gobbled a worm over along them upper Beaverkill waters, to say nothin' of a ten-pound fish basket, jest 'cause I didn't have no gun, 'long about this time last season. Whar's your gun, John?" said Bill.

"I stared at Bill and allowed that I couldn't see why a gun should be a part of my Sullivan county fishing equipment, and he said:

"B'ars, that's why! B'ars! Better git a gun, John. I'd 'a' lugged home ten pound of old sockdollagers an' wouldn't 'a' lost my ten-pound fish basket if I'd only had a gun. I was fishin' on them upper Beaverkill waters and I had jest about filled that ten-pound basket o' mine, bein' only two pounds shy o' runnin' it up to its limit.

"I clum down to the rocks to git to the spot whar I was goin' to land pair o' one-pounders, settin' my fish basket down at the top o' the rocks fer fear I mought stumble an' jest ex-like ez not spill them eight pound o' fish outen it. I got down all right, an' soon had one o' them one-pounders hooked, an' give him line. He run down the creek a hundred foot fer he stopped to rest, an' then dinged if he didn't stop right whar a slamin' big b'ar was standin' in the crick doin' a little hushin' on his own account.

"Well, sir, John," said Bill, "it's Shinnepole Gospel truth I'm tellin' you, but fore I could wind that pound trout back an' away from thar the b'ar ratched out an' socked the hooks o' his big claw on my trout, yanked it outen the water, grabbed my fish line, broke it off and, holdin' the trout up a spell fer me to take a pertin' look at it, makin' my dander rise so that it all but knocked my hat off, he gave his jaws a warnin' snap or two an' waddled outen the crick an' off into the bushes, takin' my pound trout with him. Then, I can tell you, I woke up.

"Not if I know it you don't get away with that air fish!" I hollered arter that audacious b'ar, an' turned an' shinned up them rocks to head him off an' make him stand an' deliver up that trout or take the consequences o' me a neckin' him an' shakin' him up till his toenails rattled.

"When I got back to the top I discovered that my en-pound fish basket that I had left thar fer to be safe, with them eight pound o' trout in it, wain't whar I put it. I looked all around, but it wain't nowhar to be seen. I run to the bushes an' thar I see two b'ar cubs walkin' off with my basket o' fish, cartin' it betwix 'em, like a couple o' boys carryin' a pail o' water they had been let outen school fer to go git! Say! I was jest about knocked silly! An' as I gawked arter that pair o' sassy young thievin' cubs they was flined by the old b'ar that had ketchin' my pound trout only a minute or so afore, down the crick.

"Stead o' boundin' arter that family o' highway robber b'ars, chokin' the daylight's outen 'em, an' gittin' my ten-pound fish basket an' my fish back, I was so consarned discomfudled that I stood thar like a bump on a log an' let 'em git away with the hull dinged business. But say! If I'd only had a gun! Better git a gun, John, if you'm goin' over to Sullivan arter trout an' 'spect to git away with 'em!" said Bill.

"I thanked Bill, told him I'd think about it, asked him what he'd have, paid for it, and went on my way, but hadn't got around the bend in the road by the red schoolhouse yet when I heard someone hailing me. It was Uncle Joe Bunker, who had taken a short cut and headed me off, I stopped.

"Say, John," said Uncle Joe, coming up puffing. "Bill Sanders was lyin' to you wuss'n Annylna!"

"I told Uncle Joe that I knew it. 'Didn't think I'd swallow any such doings o' bears as that, did you?' said I.

"B'ars," said Uncle Joe. "That mought easy 'a' been all right about the b'ars. But the ten-pound fish basket! Bill Sanders didn't never have no ten-pound fish basket! No, not even a one-pound fish basket!" said Uncle Joe.

Russian Victory.

General Ivan Pavlovitch sat in his room and studied the map. Then he rang the bell at his elbow. In came Sergius Julioffski, his aide-de-camp.

"What are your orders, excellency?" "Sergius Julioffski, glance over this map. Do you see this hill?"

"I do, excellency."

"That hill must be captured. Attend to the matter and let me know when it is done."

"I will, excellency."

Twenty minutes passed and there was a knock at the door. Sergius strode in, clicked his heels together, and saluted.

"Well, what is it, Sergius, my son?" "I have the honor to announce, excellency, that the hill has been captured."

"Already captured! Fine, my son, fine! Who captures it?"

"The Germans, excellency."

Shrewd Sandy.

A certain glen in Scotland had the reputation of having a splendid echo. An English gentleman visited the place, and asked his guide about the echo.

"Just about, 'Two bottles of whisky,' said the guide.

The gentleman did as requested, and after waiting for several minutes he turned to the Scot, and said:

"But I do not hear any echo."

"Maybe no," chuckled the Scot, "but here's the lassie comin' wi' the whisky."

Hard Lines.

"You look as if you'd lost the best friend you had in the world," remarked the man from Patchogue. "What seems to be the trouble?"

"My boss just notified me that the office will close at noon on Saturdays during the summer months," replied the Speonk commuter.

"I don't see why you should feel so glum about that."

"You don't, eh? Do you know what that order means to me? It means that I'll have to spend my Saturday afternoons out in the hot sun weeding the garden, instead of sitting at my desk enjoying the cool breeze from an electric fan."

For Sale.

"Every man has his price, they say."

"I wish I could get mine."

HAPPINESS HAS BEEN FOUND

Thrill, According to Banker, Guarantees the Unattainable for Ages, But Does It?

"Thrill," runs a bank's advertisement in a car window, where many a weary eye must see it night and morning, "is the guarantee of happiness."

Men have hunted for happiness for many a century, hunted for it in wealth, in power, in knowledge, in friendship, in accomplishment, in religion, in gratified vanity, in change, in freedom, in crowds and in solitudes. No one has been able to fill a lifetime with happiness. It may not have been intended that anyone should. In all lives there are onces—garden spots in the desert, with springs of clear water, where one may lie in the shade of the trees. But at the end of the road the pain at least matches the comfort, unhappiness balances the happiness. Sometimes old men say that life is worth the trouble it takes to live it, and sometimes they deny it.

"But," says the advertisement in the car, which people stare at when they are tired of looking out of the window or at each other, "thrill is the guarantee of happiness."

Some are thrifty because they cannot possibly procure more than the necessities of life. Others are thrifty from choice. They worry about their money. They wake up in the middle of the night, with cold sweat on their brows, having dreamt that the bank has failed. They deny themselves pleasures which might have allowed their lives to blossom out and expand. For the sake of a problematical future they build high walls around the present. They envy those who have more than they, and sometimes they despise those who have less.

With a few, thrift becomes the noblest of virtues. It is so when it is practiced for the sake of others. But it does not guarantee happiness. We must go a little further to find the panacea which shall cure humanity of ill and relieve it of its sorrows. If we could find out the secret we should put the seal on the philosophy of all the ages. For philosophy is a seeking after the solution proclaimed so glibly in the car placard. Philosophy's first question is, whether life is worth living, and its second question is, how it may be made most worth living; that is, happiest.

There is happiness in being without envy, in being without hatred, in being without fear. There is happiness in helping others. There is happiness in finding what one can do best, and doing it with all one's might. There is happiness in the emotion of brotherhood, in feeling in one's own body the flow of great forces which sway mankind from generation to generation.

But if we try to define happiness, or to point the way to it, we are as futile as the placard on the car. If there is a road to happiness, every man must find it for himself, and perhaps the first step will be resurrection and humility.

Unrest.

"I found a place last summer where I could rest in perfect quietude."

"Did you enjoy it?"

"No. I spent half my time on the cars getting to a place where they had moving pictures and a band."
